Legal Work Experience: I am somewhat of a rarity among attorneys - one that brings a great deal of “real world” experience to the practice of law. I earned a living as a chemical engineer and a construction company owner before choosing the law as my third (and final) profession over 20 years ago. I graduated near the top of my chemical engineering class from Louisiana State University and worked as a process engineer with a major chemical company for several years. My engineering background has proven valuable in the law practice time and time again, as having a firm grasp of mathematics and the basic sciences is essential to understanding complex cases and dissecting defense experts. Without a doubt, my scientific background has enabled Broussard & Hart to recover millions of dollars more for clients than would have been possible otherwise.

Law School Attended: South Texas College of Law

Year Graduated: 1994
